~Carl Roof, UC Berkeley

Contemporary Spirituality

“People want religion, but most people don’t want the disciplines, exactions, and commitment that go with it. For them the answer is what I call secular spirituality or seeking spirituality. Which doesn’t exact any of that. It’s religion with all the things that you don’t like taken out.”

~Martin Marty, Univ. Chicago

Contemporary Spirituality

“...The trend is to trust what we believe, what we can know from our experience and spirituality is ultimately about experience. The danger with this is that this can produce a spirituality mainly associated with the needs and satisfactions of the individual...

“Attaining a certain level of spiritual awareness then becomes a kind of consumer item I’ve got what I want materially, a BMW or whatever, and spirituality too.”

~Marcus Borg, “Jesus Scholar”
