Chafer Theological Seminary Distinctives

It's been observed that many church and seminary doctrinal statements do not always provide a clear portrait of the focus of an institution. Philosophies of ministry differ widely in groups with identical doctrinal positions. To further clarify the nuances of the Chafer Seminary focus, we have on our website our distinctives. But even that needs further clarification. Over the years, we have dedicated many of our conferences to further enhance our understanding of these distinctives.

One of our most significant distinctives is that of the sufficiency of Scripture, a phrase, unfortunately open to wide interpretation. One area in which we apply this is in the area of creation. We believe God's Word is sufficient for informing us of how and when God created. We do not hold to views which compromise with current popular models of an old-earth creation. Our keynote speaker is addressing many issues related to creation.

Another distinctive is in the area of the Christian life. We hold to a distinctive, dispensational framework for understanding the spiritual life, experiential sanctification, in this dispensation. Two of this year's presentations focus on aspects of this distinctive.

A third distinctive is a premillennial, pretribulational, classic dispensational view of God's plan for history. This year four presentations will help refine our understanding of this distinctive.

Keynote speaker: Dr. James Johnson

Jim Johnson serves as the Institute for Creation Research's chief academic officer, associate professor, and special counsel. Previously he taught for LeTourneau University, Dallas

Christian College, and Concordia University Texas (history, ethics, biosciences, ecology, apologetics, evidence, law, and international studies). Johnson's forensic science background includes a J.D. (University of North Carolina, 1984), trial attorney and judicial experience, two post-doctoral certifications, and American Academy of Forensic Sciences membership.

Dr. Johnson's biblical studies background includes biblical languages study (American Bible Society Award, 1982, mostly for Hebrew and Aramaic), a Th.D. (Emmanuel College of Christian Studies, 1996), ACSI credentials, and service as a Protestant chaplain (BSA, National Capital Area). He is a contributor to Guide to Creation Basics and Creation Basics & Beyond.

Topics Dr. Johnson will cover include:

- The Doxological Theology of "Filling the Earth"
- God Values Variety: Animals & Habitats Show God's Glory
- Providential Migrations: Families, Individuals, & the Gospel
- Family History & Grace: Applying Creation Theology to Individuals
- How Fake "Science" and Sloppy Theology Both Oppose Genesis
- Opportunities to Connect Genesis Truth with the Gospel
